

Insidious terrifies viewers with unique suspense

By Vanezia Hamilton
Middle College High School

The word “insidious” means to be slowly and subtly harmful or destructive, according to the MSN Encarta dictionary, and the movie lives up to the definition. From the creators of Saw and Paranormal Activity, this horror film is the terrifying story of a family who, shortly after moving, discover that dark spirits have possessed their home and that their son has inexplicably fallen into a coma.

Trying to escape the haunting and save their son, they move again only to discover that it was not their house that was haunted.

The son, Dalton, played by Ty Simpkins, was excellent and he helped make the movie sincere and believable. I felt happy for Daltons at the end of the movie.

I enjoyed how the set designers placed certain objects, like an image of a jig saw made famous in the Saw movies.

Some might say the movie was not that scary, and they laughed throughout the whole thing. I wanted to keep my eyes covered throughout the entire movie. The movie is not scary in the sense of dead bodies and buckets of blood, but it is scary because it makes you feel insecure.

Insidious makes you truly believe that there could possibly be malicious spirits stalking the living, plotting to take over anyone’s body. The movie is so good that I have resorted to a night-light.

If you do not believe me, go check it out, and ask yourself at night...what really made that creaking sound down the hallway?

Bring the real world into your classroom with the e-Appeal digital edition!

The e-Appeal is an EXACT REPLICHA of The Commercial Appeal. Unlike The Commercial Appeal web page which only has selected stories, the e-Appeal provides access to the complete content of the newspaper. This includes sports, comics, ads, puzzles, book serializations and special sections such as Go Memphis.

Students, share this ad with your teachers so they can sign up today and enliven your classroom.

With easy navigational tools, you can flip through pages and skim headlines, just as you would with the traditional newspaper. Also, try out a fun, weekly multiple-choice quiz with articles from The Commercial Appeal, updated cartoon activities and a weekly geography quiz.

The e-Appeal is a great resource for all students, including student journalists with the Teen Appeal. You can read stories as models for your own writing. Also, you can use the word search to find articles on topics of interest in past issues.

How does a teacher sign up for the e-Appeal?

If your teacher hasn't registered for the e-Appeal this year, he or she can go to the NIE web page, www.nieonline.com/memphis and click on the "Register for the eAppeal at no charge" link at the top of the page, left of the log-in area. The teacher will fill out the form and submit. There is no charge to the teacher or school, thanks to the support of sponsors and your school district.

How do students gain access to the e-Appeal?

Students use the teacher's e-mail address and a generic password that we provide. Students and teachers can access the e-Appeal any place where there is Internet access. So students can log in at home, public libraries, the computer lab, the school library, etc.
